The Chase Travel points system is managed by Chase through its Ultimate Rewards program. It is designed to give cardholders flexible redemption options for travel and everyday purchases.

The core policy is simple:

- Points have no expiration as long as the account is active
- Redemption value depends on card type

- Travel redemptions often offer the highest value
- Transfers to partners follow fixed conversion ratios

This flexibility is what makes Chase points one of the most popular reward systems in the U.S.

Chase Travel Points Policy How Redemption Works (Step-by-Step Guide)

1. Redeeming Through the Chase Travel Portal

The most common method is booking directly through the Chase Travel portal.

How it works:

- Log in to your Chase account
- Open Ultimate Rewards Travel
- Search flights, hotels, or rentals
- Choose “Pay with Points” at checkout

Your points are deducted instantly at a fixed redemption rate.

---

2. Transfer to Airline and Hotel Partners

One of the highest-value options is transferring points to travel partners.

Benefits include:

- Higher value per point in many cases
- Access to premium flight cabins
- Better hotel upgrade opportunities

However, transfers are usually irreversible, so compare before converting.

3. Partial Payment with Points and Cash

Chase allows flexible payments:

- Use points for part of the cost
- Pay remaining balance with card

- Adjust redemption based on budget

This helps preserve points for higher-value trips.
